

Dudleya brittonii

Britton Dudleya

Succulent

Part sun inlands

Little summer water

Origin: Northwestern Baja California

Several species of succulent Dudleya are native to California. This one forms a solitary rosette of chalky blue green succulent foliage six to twelve inches in diameter. In spring red flower stalks about two feet long form with yellow flowers at the tip. Plant it in well-drained soil or as a potted specimen. Avoid overwatering during the summer when the leaves naturally shrink. Potted plants will need more water. Britton Dudleya makes a striking accent or focal point. Protect it from mealybugs, aphids, snails, slugs and deer. It also needs protection from freezing temperatures.
